

We take our customers and employees health and wellbeing as seriously as we take our water. Priority number one will always be the people that make Lindyspring the great company that it is. As the concern grows about the spread of COVID-19, Lindyspring wants you to know some of the additional steps that are being taken in our facilities.

- Employees are directed to stay home or seek immediate medical attention if they have been exposed to or have any flu or cold like symptoms.
- Employees have received additional training concerning hand washing and proper food safety practices.
- Recommendations and guidelines from the CDC and WHO are being monitored and implemented daily at all Lindyspring facilities.
- Additional cleaning and disinfecting supplies are readily available for the increased cleaning and sanitation of all food contact areas, work surfaces, and any other frequently touched places.
- Each day extra emphasis is placed on proper handwashing and sanitizing procedures.
- Delivery drivers and service technicians are provided with hand sanitizer and disinfecting wipes to keep in their company vehicle.

Lindyspring bottled water has been regulated by FDA inspections for over 20 years. This includes the established guidelines of the Food Safety Plan and Good Manufacturing Practices. It is Lindyspring's pride to bring people the pure, delicious, and safe water they have come to know and love. Lindyspring wants you to be confident that every step is being taken to ensure the health and safety of its customers and employees.

Lindyspring will continue to stay up to date on the ever-changing COVID-19 situation. Please visit the safety and care section of our website, www.lindyspring.com to see our purification process, and basic care for your Lindyspring water dispenser.

While this event is still unfolding, we truly believe that we will get through this together. Water, more importantly good water, is essential to life and that is what Lindyspring will continue to provide.
